Neil started his legal career in 1989 as a trainee with Edwards Geldard Solicitors (now Geldards). In 1991 Neil joined Hugh James where he spent the next 23 years and became an equity partner. At Hugh James, he was head of the Social Housing team and established and headed the Property Litigation and Housing Management teams and the Anti-Social Behaviour Unit.

Neil joined Darwin Gray in 2014 as a partner. Neil heads the Social Housing team, and alongside Rhodri Lewis, heads the Property Litigation team.

Neil is well known for his expertise in property litigation, social housing and commercial dispute resolution. He has a wealth of experience and expertise and is committed to providing a high quality, professional and cost effective service to his clients. Neil works closely with his clients to understand their needs and build long-standing relationships.

Neil is also highly regarded for his training skills. He has been a regular chair and speaker at conferences and has provided in-house and external training to clients and representative bodies for over 20 years. Neil is an experienced advocate and a trained mediator and, as a fluent Welsh speaker, can deliver a bilingual service.

Neil has extensive experience of Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR). He is well known in both the real estate and social housing sectors and has for many years been recognised by Chambers & Partners and Legal 500 for his expertise in both property litigation and social housing. He has been described by Chambers as “massively knowledgeable” and that he “instils an aura of calm determination”.
